The Reason Behind This Madness.

"Not all who wander are lost"

Hello there. If you are here it is because you have a certain type of awareness that has led you to an interest in aspects of our existence that too easily can be forgotten. I have spent my entire life going back n forth between my souls perspective & my flawed human perspective. I have spent over a decade studying various philosophies and ideologies to unravel the nature of mankind & our role in the universe. It began when I was a child and experienced immense pain & suffering. It compelled me to turn away from the world, and the veil of a basic life for a basic human was ripped away from me. It made me see a side of life that many can overlook, but for me it forced me to look deeper into things and what I have found is that we as humans are collectively in a dilemma. One of the heart, mind & soul. Yet many of us are inherently ignorant of our true design, our true nature. We are a spiritual being in a physical body and as a result we are bound & woven into the spiritual realm that lies beyond the physical. It has become of my life's missions to help bridge the gap from the mundane into the supernatural. From the lower into the higher. We are in a transitional period collectively. We once were united under a collective "tribal" consciousness and somewhere along the line we servered and cast before us our shadows. We became infatuated with our reflection rather than looking upward towards our maker. It is of no surprise the conditions of the world. We are at war with one another & most of the time we are at war inside ourselves. All that matters to me is taking my understanding from years of studies to help others understand the importance of this existence in hopes that a seed will be planted in each of us. That will grow into the pivotal force that will bring us back into alignment with ourselves & the world around us.

From my heart to yours. I present to you "A Caring & Thoughtful Guide Into Spiritual Evolution"

Shifting Perspective.

We must understand that all that we experience is perspective and depending and our outlook and interpretation that shapes how we perceive the world within & around us. When thinking of humans in the same sense as an organic machine we can paint a picture that makes us understand that all machines must operate within a certain capacity in order to properly function & operate. The operative forces that determine our subjective reality is how we perceive that subjective reality. So for us as humans in order to function properly in harmony with ourselves and the world around us perception is key. When thinking in terms of collective consciousness and spiritual evolution this key must be a shared "collective" perspective that binds and forms our subjective perspective. What I am delving into now has been portrayed through various cultures and philosophies as morality, or as I call it in relation to collective consciousness Universal Morality. When we look at all philosophies we see a common "theme" or shared belief that is transcribed through the lense of said cultures shared experience. Universal Morality is the interconnected foundation in which all righteous philosophies are built upon. If we base our perception off of Universal Morality which is a shared belief that brings us into harmony within ourselves which bares fruit and if properly tended and nurtured it brings us into alignment with the universe. By bringing our perception into this field of thought & being we become credible entities, and these entities are the very embodiment of spiritual evolution. The shift in subjective consciousness that blossoms into the operating engine in which transforms us into a collective consciousness in terms of electromagnetic interconnectedness. Meaning we all have chosen to perceive reality through a shared lense, or shared belief and as a result of that we transcend individuality & begin to embody observing collectively while experiencing subjectively. This is what is called universal design as we are the micro within the macro. There are levels to this shit so to speak. So if we perceive our subjective reality through the lense of our egos we entertain illusions in which fuel and accelerate the resistance within as a result of being currently within an individualistic based existence collectively. We have to manually & individually bring ourselves to a point of perception that it shifts our vibrations from the lower more primal animalistic form of the human race into the image of God that we are molded from. This process & this journey is what I call spiritual evolution & once properly "perceived" you will drop to your knees and weep. Not from sadness, but from truly getting a glimpse of God's design. It is beyond human capabilities to truly perceive the operative intricacy of how each and every atomic molecule has its own role & function that are perfectly & inseparably interconnected. we as humans are given the task of carrying these truths within a limited & flawed physical form. Once we perceive universal reality as it is within our capacity to understand heaven is all around & it has always been around. We are standing on top of it clueless it is beneath us. It cries to us, begs and pleads with us to stop, it mourns deeper than the heart can even possibly ache. It is time, & it's been time & it will always be time to take action and individually bring ourselves through awareness & working together and being accountable into alignment with what is, what was, and what will always be. It all starts with shifting perspective.

From my heart to yours.

Thought Provocation.

"I fucking love you all. This life is so special, and miraculous. I've had a very very hard life, and it has all lead me to this. Be kind, be loving, and be yourself no matter what! The rest falls into place"

Thought provocation is the energy transference associated with ideas, conceptualization, and thought realms from one individual or entity to another. It can also mean challenging someone to think about things they haven't considered before, or help dissolve reservations or limitations on their current thought processes as a result of thought provocation.

Thought provocation should be used to encourage people to explore new ideas and question assumptions, or preexisting thought mechanisms to help bring about a progression in their current understanding. It can also help people move out of their usual thought patterns and come up with creative solutions, or newer ways to percieve their experiences and ultimately their inner and external reality. This is a great tool to helping ensure others achieve, and fully understand universal morality.

For anyone who has a deep compelling nature to illuminate certain aspects of life, learning how to properly implement the tool of thought provocation is a vital part in helping others branch out and become enlightened in one form or another. This is ultimately only possible through the willingness of the reciever. With a vigilant, and thirsty mind for knowledge thought provocation can be the tool that pushes us into revolutionary ways of thinking, and application that can challenge our current stance on subjects such as philosophy, science, political, societal, etc.

By using speechcraft and the art of expression, and sharing information in a specific way that pieces together subjects in a manner that gradually paints pictures and guides thoughts is what the magic of thought provocation is all about. To properly wield this gift in unison with spiritual principles is to be a powerful force for preserving collective truth. This is a common practice with all credible entities, as they realize the importance of our perceptions & thoughts of ourselves & the world around us. If we borrow the concept from masonic symbolism their philosophy states as follows: there are three tiers of conceptualization and comprehension. There are those who understand life's mysteries in its complexity through various forms of intuition and intellect, those who do not naturally possess this ability but are capable of learning and recieving, and those who are not evolved enough to grasp such complexities by design and are only capable of receiving. This is the importance of universal morality. As it helps bring us all collectively into alignment with universal laws.

Thought provocation can be used to help those who can learn to understand and grasp teachings that naturally cannot be obtained through conventional means of analysis. By handing down precise and helpful information from generation to generation with love and care inside our hearts we ensure the progression of humans as a species continues to thrive by taking critical lessons, stories, and examples and organizing them in a way that leads our young, impressionable minds into fields of thought that may have been left behind in time without our care and focus. Provocation in general is the moving of thoughts into new spaces. Let's be honest in today's times we truly need to move into territories of thought centered around unifying forces that bring about the change we all truly desire within ourselves. This is the importance of credible entities, universal laws, & transcendental ideologies.

We all crave love, light, and inner peace naturally & organically. Even those tainted and corrupted by trauma, selfishness, power, and greed deep within their core they became that way from a lack of love, or a disconnect from others to a point they began to only focus on self. Either they were neglected, or bullied, or unvalued. Whatever the cause even those in power who destroy others lives for their own benefit, even they crave light, and love. Thought provocation is another tool in the credible entities arsenal if we are to encourage, provoke, and bring about the change we want to see.

Another tool we can use is the power of visualization to manifest the life we desire, and a life where we can all live in harmony. The power of visualization" refers to the ability to use your mind to create vivid mental images of desired outcomes, which can significantly boost motivation, confidence, and ultimately help you achieve your goals by activating the brain's neural pathways and creating a sense of "mental rehearsal" for success; essentially, imagining yourself achieving something can increase the likelihood of actually doing it. This is ultimately a form of manifestation. By visualizing a "way of thinking and feeling" that embodies a certain mindset and achievement, the laws of attraction will meet you in the middle and begin to bring the desired result to you.

This is a form of mental rehearsal by doing so consistently, envisioning your future self and what that looks and feels like will ultimately bring that to you. This is the true power of our brains in unison with universal laws of application. Your brain eventually won't be able to differentiate the vision, and will mistake it for being reality, which in turn causes manifestation to happen in your life.

A colleague of mine once put it this way, the universe consists of a dimension entirely based upon possibilities, in this dimension is pure energy waiting to resignate with a host. By creating a very strong visualization within yourself and practicing this daily, the dimension of possibilities will connect with your electromagnetic field and bring this possibility to you. This is where the phrase anything is possible comes from.

By vividly imagining yourself performing a task or achieving a goal, you can mentally prepare your body and mind for the real-life situation, enhancing performance. Activating positive emotions associated with your desired outcome can further motivate you to take action. Visualization can help you focus on specific goals and details, increasing mental clarity and decision-making ability. By creating a positive mental image, visualization can help alleviate anxiety and stress related to a situation. When you imagine yourself succeeding, it can boost your self-belief and confidence in your ability to achieve your goals.

All of these things in application in your life will bring about ultimate manifestation for your ultimate dreams and desires. It is too easy to look around you and feel outnumbered and that the odds of you "winning" so to speak seem against you. This will bring you into a negative vibrational field, and as a result you are manifesting the doubt within you which closes doors instead of opening them. It's a tricky situation to find yourself in, let alone get out of. But by consistently practicing these methods with persistence I promise you, by universal law you will manifest the desired result. At first it seems pointless and futile, but once you form a habit from it, it becomes second nature, and after it becomes second nature you begin to fully trick your mind into beleiving you already are the desired result. I just truly want all of us to fulfill our dreams. Hopefully this short section can further help those along the journey od becoming their best selves. The Power Of Visualization is a must have tool in anyone's arsenal, by using it properly the ends are limitless.

Primal Nature.

"Understanding the lower vibrational realm of the human experience"

This entire section is to get on the level of those who are experiencing and have entered the domain of the primal nature within us all. This is mainly for those who have experienced immense trauma and pain in their life. As I too have walked that path into the darkness never thinking I would escape it's grasp. When you go through so much in life it begins to change you, restructure you & bring you into very destructive mentalities which aren't truly your fault. But the harsh truth is that it doesn't give you the right to make others life's hell because of it, and if you have found yourself in that position where you truly cannot stop being angry, depressed and so hateful or miserable towards yourself or the world around you, you are not alone. The tricky thing about this is when you are in that domain of thought the last thing you ever want to hear is that you must change the way you think. Hell, you feel you have every right to feel that way. But the thoughts that slip your mind when entertaining these things isn't you have the right to, it should be "is this working out for you" and if your truly honest with yourself the answer is obviously no.

What I've realized from my many experiences of encountering individuals like this alongside escaping it myself is that 99% of the time these individuals just truly need someone to not judge them, to see them where they are and to give them love, acceptance & encouragement. I have seen countless times people transform almost overnight just from being exposed to spiritual principles in true embodiment. It is a powerful & very beautiful force. All you must do is truly begin to separate yourself from your thoughts and feelings, because spiritual principles teach us that we are a spirit and a spirit does not have thoughts or feelings, a human does. Since we are both spirit & human we must bring the two into alignment. In order to bring the two into alignment we must first become deeply accountable for where we are at in life. Once you accept responsibility and stop blaming the world for how your feeling and realize it is you who is creating this. Only then are you ready to begin the transition from primal into spiritual. This is design.

Ive truly spent most my life in situations because of my immense pain within myself & its truly taken me over a decade to compartmentalize my experience and separate myself from the immense changing and altering of my thoughts and emotions as a result of that experience. This is what compels me to write & share. I personally know the intense sacrifice and willingness it takes to be a credible entity. It is unfair, unjust, and fucked up that it becomes our responsibility to shed generation wounds. But also this is where the beauty is. We are the makers and creators of our reality & once we become aware and consciouse we become unstoppable because we know the depths of the abyss. We know the endless nights alone crying ourselves to sleep. Aching just to FEEL normal. You are not alone, we are all in this together. Yes of course some more privileged than others but non the less we are all simultaneously alive together. It is our responsibility to manually bring ourselves into alignment with ultimate reality & truth. Our thoughts and emotions are just a result of experiencing this limited physical existence. There is an entire dimension of possibilities and potential outcomes waiting to resinate with our internal processes. This is called manifestation. Once we become aware that we are truly an interdimensional being who can possess interdimensional frequencies within us we begin to truly radicalize our inner workings, and rather than getting consumed by our reflection(shadow) we begin to look up to our maker. This is by design, and when you meet our maker nothing is the same as it was before. Once you begin to receive the vastness of infinite love within you everything around you embodies that love. You become only surrounded with individuals who walk a similar path. All of which reciprocate these energies from one another and back the universe and so on and so forth until all the world is embodying universal design. This is spiritual evolution, and we are on our way. I promise.

This section is for those who struggle deeply with impatience and cannot render control as a result of the trauma you have experienced. You want it now and fuck what it takes to make it happen you were done wrong. Why should you have to put in all this hard work? Sounds pretty toxic right? That's because it is. Universal Law & the natural world shows us you are not owed absolutely anything. You are already complete, all you must do is dial in, and adjust yourself accordingly. This requires immense discipline, especially if you are stubborn and LOCKED IN with you feeling entitled to the way you feel. Of course we all feel negative emotions and thoughts. That's not what I'm referring to. I'm referring to the illogical belief that it isn't your responsibility to shape your own reality. The external world doesnt control you. You control you, and if you somehow how perceived things in a tangled knot into believing it is the world's fault for how you feel you are deeply mistaken. It is up to us to polarize the primal into the spiritual nature of things. It all starts with harsh and critical accountability & accepting life on life's terms. Only then are you ready to bring yourself into true alignment with universal design & law. The truth is this stuff takes time, we didn't get where we are now overnight. So we sure as hell won't escape it overnight either. It takes immense determination and acceptance and accountability over ones own thoughts and emotions to begin to receive small crumbs from the table of our higher selves. But once you get a taste you will become infatuated with more. This is design. Once we can accept we're nasty inside and it's not helping you then you can begin to entertain "what else can I do to make this easier on me". This is where spiritual principles come into play, and why throughout time you see individuals like me feel compelled to share this vital information. It is my duty and responsibility to inform in a caring and thoughtful way. We all deserve to feel infinite love within us. To love ourselves for who we are without any need for validation or approval. We validate ourselves, we approve ourselves, we create ourselves & once the universe or God or whatever the fuck you call it hears your call. You will receive exactly what you put into it. This is by design. We are truly that powerful. We truly shape the reality around us by what we focus and entertain within us. But we cannot understand or grasp these things if we're only focusing on the nasty filth of the primal. We become blinded, diluted, and brought into the domain of a very small and shallow field of view. It is our responsibility to transmute the inner workings into alignment with universal design. There is literally no other way around it. There is a natural order to things and we must bring ourselves to it's door, or we may never truly know all this life has to offer. You deserve it. You deserve love & everlasting life. Do you think your ready to do what it takes? I believe in you

Spiritual Principles.

"These principles are domains of energy that we can embody through practicing & implementing actions, thoughts, beliefs, and perceptions associated with higher vibrational dimensions"

Spiritual Principles are virtues and concepts woven around the fact we are a delicate & intricate spiritual being overall. It is a set of beliefs that fundamentally construct our way of existing within ourselves & with others around us. Many philosophies for thousands of years depict such things. The importance is all the same. We must act, think, behave, and exist within a certain perimeter if we are to operate and function harmoniously without interferences from our shadow, ego, or limited physical perceptual understanding. The universe is layered and comprised of a multitude of dimensional realms intricately woven together by universal design, and we are smack dab in the middle of it all. How I see it is it's not a "why should we" use spiritual principles but a "how do we" use spiritual principles, because once we are aware of how powerful and impactful our thoughts & inner dialogue are, and the effects it plays on our reality. We naturally will adopt understandings that make sure our inner thoughts and dialogue manifest the best possible outcome for ourselves. It all boils down to truly understanding human & universal design & how the two are woven together. Once understood we naturally lean towards the discarding of things that get in the way of operating at the highest frequency or lifestyle possible.

Spiritual principles are a set of beliefs that once understood bring us into alignment with ourselves and our spiritual nature. When we speak of love, kindness, acceptance, patience, forgiveness, persistence, determination, motivation, encouragement, faith, hope, etc, we are describing spiritual principles in essense. The golden rule for example, treating others how you want to be treated exists because of spiritual principles. So if we look at ourselves and our lives and we see selfishness, anger, frustration, jealousy, envy, covetous ideology we can call those things primal principles. Since all things are energy in essense spiritual principles fluctuate on a higher vibration & primal principles fluctuate at a lower vibration. If we study and analyze ourselves where do we draw energy from? The primal or the spiritual? Spiritual evolution is the process in which be bring ourselves into alignment of the spiritual side of things. This can be a daunting, and very trialing process as it requires immense sincerity in truthful analysis of our inner workings. It requires us to be deeply accountable for our actions, thoughts, and behaviors. If we are an individual who leans towards projecting things and shifting blame on the external you will find it very very difficult to align yourself with spiritual principles. As you cannot enter into that domain when filling your limited space with primal principles. They fluctuate and occupy space in very different ranges of vibration & frequency and since we are basically a radio transmitter it is up to us to turn the dial so to speak. What has truly helped me along the way has been studying and absorbing a multitude of different philosophies and ideologies. It's very fun for me naturally. As it is vitally important because philosophy is simply the study of how we live, and by taking various different philosophies and finding the binding interconnected forces that relate them to one another. We begin to understand that this isn't a joke, or a game, and it isn't simply something you either care about or don't care about. The way we exist and how we exist is the very essence of our existence. That sounds silly but it's true. If we find ourselves predominantly in a range of lower vibrational thoughts such as immense anger at the world around us. How can we possibly expect anything to change if we can't even resolve that internal conflict within ourselves. It all begins with awareness. To become aware of oh shit, this isn't healthy for me. I cannot focus on love right now, and I haven't for a while. Yes, that's a very fucking scary place to be. Unable to tap into the depths within us and find universal design & love inside us? It's absolutely terrifying to live in this world only focusing on the grimey, slimey, and intoxicating effects of primal principles. You quickly lose your essence, and can never form a true relationship to your soul by entertaining these things. So eventually if your aware, you will organically begin to become accountable for entertaining these negative things. This is by design. When you get to that point in awareness you will change. Once you begin to change and shift you begin to receive. What you are receiving is information and knowledge from high places, and as a result of this you begin to transform and enter new domains no longer associated with your old, dirty, toxic mindset. The things you begin to adopt in exchange for such hard shadow work is the very essence and embodiment of spiritual principles. Once you begin to raise yourself to a level where your on the receiving end you begin to form a relationship with your soul & the universe. You begin to see things differently, more carefully and intricately. You begin to understand how precious this life is, and as a result of entertaining these new things you develop a "frame of mind". Once established you no longer go back n forth between primal principles & spiritual ones. You have put in the hard shadow work & have evolved to the next phase of all this. This is by design. You become fundamentally reshaped around these new beliefs and understandings. Once you walk this path there is no going back. You are well on your way to becoming a credible entity. A force that organically opposes ignorance & individualism. You are on the opposite side of this. And what you have been doing as a result of transforming your thought process into alignment with spiritual principles is called polarization. You have shifted yourself from one frequency into another. It is truly so beautiful to understand, and experience. It is life changing & the reason why you see all these people talk about these things. It's not an ego thing, they aren't doing or saying or preaching these things for simple amusement, or to make themselves look good. They want you to understand these things so you no longer are engulfed in pointless, meaningless suffering that can easily be avoided by just simply living, thinking, and behaving within a certain range. It all comes from a place of deep love. From the newfound awareness you naturally become compelled to embody this fully. As a result of this others notice & pick up on the shift happening within you. This is the importance of surrounding yourself with the right individuals who are on your same level. Once you transcend from primal into spiritual it is toxic and defective of you to remain around those still battling with themselves in the primal realm of existing. All you can do is lead by example and truly walk this path & embody it within the best of your ability. All fall short. All entertain the primal. It is the very nature of us as humans to be capable of complex contradictions without combustion.

Once we get the hang of what is required of us to stay in alignment you will have noticed how the universe speaks to you through others, and how you gravitate towards the energy you entertain within. Compelling you even further to take this extremely serious as this is your life. And it has so much meaning to it, and purpose. All you must do is surrender & begin to provoke within you the compelling nature of universal design. This path is the journey to spiritual evolution & once we all collectively begin to understand these things not only do we shed the primal on a subjective level, but we also begin to restructure systems around us that also embody the primal nature. This is when we start to enter into the transition from individual into the collective. This is by design. There is no other way. Our ancestors who are in alignment with these truths have handed down these energies for thousands of years all in the name of spiritual evolution. It is within our DNA to awaken cosmic revelations within us. All we must do is be willing and courageous enough to face the mirror and ask ourselves what do we stand for? What do we want to embody, and where do we begin? Hopefully this information helps you with that. It's all love.

From my heart to yours.

Systemic Design.

"Systemic designs once brought into alignment with spiritual principles will ensure our institutions, governments, and organizations are based around mankind's collective best interest"

Systemic design is the structural format that creates, organizes and implements the content within said system. This is integral for reshaping our collective reality as we currently have systems in place that accelerate and prevent collective consciousness from forming & taking shape.

Systemic designs in general can either be used as a means to help maintain overall growth, structure and connection between those involved, or if used by those in power with individualistic agendas these systems can be used to keep us divided, distracted, drained, and at unrest with one another. If left corrupt it becomes the soul pivotal force in which keeps us from uniting under love & Universal Morality as a result of being so drained & misinformed, and from a lack of structural care involving universal morality as the foundation when constructing any system we use. In order to understand the effects of corruption within systemic design we must consider, the system, its context, and it's environment simultaneously with the shared belief of universal Morality. So if those who are constructing this do not have mankind's best interest in heart it is our role to remove those who are in power and replace them with credible entities who use universal morality as their core basis in all systemic design and creation. This is plain and simple, we cannot allow anyone who creates policies to hide, conceal, or imbed any ideology that can divide, separate or weaken us as a society. This renders us incapable of rising above and dismantling corrupt systems in place. It also fuels division at such a rate we cannot even properly point the finger at where the actual problem lies.

By being informed, and educated we can use analytical tools along with technology to expose these corrupted designs, and replace them with ones that have our collective interest in mind. Systems are in place to create structure for us all, this structure should be in alignment with spiritual principles since we spiritual beings overall. This ensures a continual progression and growth within our societies. If we find ourselves being bound by systems in place that simply keep us in a never ending circle we can see that our best interests are not in mind. Most people are discouraged by fear upon these realizations which further keeps us from rising above & uniting. Ignorance is bliss as they say. But for some of us we didn't ask for this knowledge or to have the veil of ignorance swept from our faces. We were placed in certain positions so we can painfully and precisely expose these things.

Flawed systemic designs give birth to countless spiriual and psychologicial repressions that take a while to unfold and become exposed and unrooted. This is what we are doing now. Unprogramming years and years of generational wounds & brainwashing tactics. It all starts with being properly educated on these subjects. To have individuals explain these things with care and thoughtfulness the sole purpose of enlightening, and helping bring about positive change. What we see in our modern systemic designs are those who claim to look out for our well being, but look at the fine print and actual effort being put into resolving these things you begin to see a thoroughly constructed means to keep us in this sort of loop that repeats itself about every generation. Leaving us unable to expose as a result of the constant repackaging of disruptive energies that take hold in every changing, various forms in our systems before us. This gets repackaged and redistributed to the masses and leaves us with just enough hope along with a weary and tired soul to keep believing everything will work out. That means this system in place needs refined, if not entirely dismanted. I am all for dismantlement of this side show circus freak act that encourages and praises generic, unoriginal forms of existence. Shits wack.

Understanding what a systemic design is, is the first step to being able to recognize what the intentions of each system in place has over us. If we discover a system in place that is used for corruption or that creates a negative experience for us, then it is our responsibility to unravel it, understand it, and begin to find solutions to expose, and replace said system for the universal benefit of mankind as a whole. This is what the constitution was literally created for. They are literally taking away our rights before our very eyes and were so at each other's throats or in such a deep trance we cannot snap out of it and unify. If once we expose this and speak up about it and we find that we are greeted with resistance, or toxic acts of being targeted as being a heretic or rebel then it becomes apparent we are being controlled, and apparent that that aspect or area of life needs focused on and reshaped based upon universal morality & spiritual principles. That our systemic designs and policies are not there to help us, they are there to keep us in line with their agendas and the moment we clear the smoke so to speak and stop fighting one another and point the finger at the culprit it is very important to decipher the reaction we are given. If not taken serious revolution isn't just a good idea, it's absolutely essential to restore true order and law based on universal love and spiritual principles. This is our duty as being a member of a society.

I usually don't get into specifics in terms of subjectivity but let's dive into one of the most destructive one of all, systemic racism. The creation of race which is the categorization of humans is a system in place that divides us into groups based on a certain type of characteristics, and traits based on primarily physical analysis. By creating this system we are automatically dividing and subtracting rather than adding and multiplying. The issue with this is that once this system is practiced by a society or culture, it allows for those in power to be able to weaponize it against us very quickly if not immediately. Here is the definition and further explanation of what institutional racism(systemic racism) is in its entirety. By understanding it only then can we create permanent solutions.

Institutional racism, also known as systemic racism, is a form of institutional discrimination based on race or ethnic group and can include policies and practices that exist throughout a whole society or organization that result in and support a continued unfair advantage to some people and unfair or harmful treatment of others. It manifests as discrimination in areas such as criminal justice, employment, housing, healthcare, education and political representation.

It is ultimately the side effect of human categorization, and if left unresolved will divide us for as long as we exist here on earth. We do not need to have in any society here on earth a system in place that can effect any individual based on their physical characteristics and traits These are things we cannot change about ourselves, therefore is pure disgust to do so for any reason. It is not intrinsic to humankind to use racial human categorization. We do not need it to understand any culture, or tradition as these identify and separate themselves from one another already. By systemically removing what race is, and how it is used we will no longer be able to create policies or practices that unfairly effect individuals based on human categorization. We should instead differentiate ourselves and one another socially based on culture and tradition rather than physical characteristics, especially since we are so diverse now with our individual genealogy. Most humans these days have multiple different phenotypes in our blood from multiple cultures being mixed together as a result of reproduction. Someone can have a color we call black, but actually be 90% from India. Someone can look white and have 90% origins from South Africa. It becomes apparent human categorization was created from a mind with an agenda, one powered and fueled by division, and power. It should be illegal for any governing force to determine who/what you are based on physical aspects. This is a drastic measure of course but drastic times require absolute resolutions.

Systemic racism wasnt technically a term until the late 1960s. The term institutional racism was first coined in 1967 by Stokely Carmichael and Charles V. Hamilton in Black Power: The Politics of Liberation. Carmichael and Hamilton wrote in 1967 that, while individual racism is often identifiable because of its overt nature, institutional racism is less perceptible because of its "less overt, far more subtle" nature. Institutional racism "originates in the operation of established and respected forces in the society, and thus receives far less public condemnation than [individual racism]. This is insightful as it reveals that governing forces can subtly conceal racism within its policies and laws that make it hard to directly point out in a universal way the basis of racism within said policies. This directly proves ill intent. By using certain words, and concepts they can win from the ignorance of their people using desperate measures and targeting real issues we experience.

Once these policies become in effect, only then can we begin to see the true nature of their intentions. As with the housing act of 1934. They worded it in a way that sounded as if they were trying to help overall debt in America. Which from those Americans who truly are struggling they think our government is helping. And since the issue was real and truly effecting the American people, our ignorance allowed us to be blind to the true nature of its design. Our government only needs a certain percentage in combination with media to portay false images to the masses to create a divide amongst us. Only by truly understanding what is going on, and how systemic designs are engineered can we expose these designs as being corrupt or helping fuel division among the masses.

Institutional racism was defined by Sir William Macpherson in the UK's Lawrence report (1999) as: "The collective failure of an organisation to provide an appropriate and professional service to people because of their colour, culture, or ethnic origin. It can be seen or detected in processes, attitudes and behaviour that amount to discrimination through prejudice, ignorance, thoughtlessness, and racist stereotyping which disadvantage minority ethnic people."

This information is truly revealing as it further explores the failure of the system we've put in place. Meaning that the systemic design we have created to categorize humans truly has very little benefit collectively.

Many of us have been compelled by this systemic design to dig into its nature so we can see what is really going on here. Almost all who have opened up this concern have found that human categorization as we know it, is destructive to us collectively. It is time we implement a new system. One that is universally applicable to us all, and one that leaves no room for corruption.

Ultimately what these things expose is that there is a power imbalance within those societies who practice these so easily corruptable policies. It starts from the top(the governing force) and trickles its way down into all aspects of said nation, culture, or society. By recognizing this imbalance of power and tracing where it came from can we begin to draw the line of what is acceptable and what is unacceptable and it is up to the people to resovle this. The governing body will not do this for us. It is from a place of deep love and care that I comprise my theories, ideologies, and thought processes on these sensitive destructive practices we do as humans here on earth. Enough is enough. It is time we reshape the world we want to live in, and a world we want our great great grandchildren to be protected by. A world where we have founded a universal policy in which cannot allow any policies based on anything that has a negative outcome. Policies are meant to prevent these things, not create, and fuel them.

"Let's disrupt the very fabric of illusory existence with vigilance, persistence and a fiery passion for illuminating light & love for all".

Universal Morality.

Us as humans in the modern times we live in have fallen short of collective consciousness. We have severed the thread where the universe reveals itself through us all. This gives birth to subjective reality that mistakens itself as the objective ultimate truth. When in reality this is just a side effect of being seperate from the collective experience. We as a species operate and function properly when we identify as a whole rather than as seperate entities. We are spiritual beings, and that spiritual realm is within us all, and through our electromagnetic field it connects each of us together. Many of us are beyond ignorant of this truth. If we understand and truly study how our current collective mental health is, what is revealed to us is a critical crisis that we truly havent quite identified as it is. See what it really boils down to is universal morality. Which is the thing needed to connect to higher dimensional frequencies in a hollistic beneficial manner that brings each individual into inner alignment. Which so happens to be an integral part in spiritual evolution for us as a species. So by us disconnecting from universal morality individually we sever the energy from transferring within us back outward into the universal formed by universal law. This interaction is one of divinity. And ultimately our responsibility to maintain. We get this beautiful thing, and in exchange we channel cosmic energies through us. When we pick up on flawed constructs like individualism and take on the notion we actually know what the fuck is going on what were doing on an energy level is catastrophic. The consequences are what you are now seeing unfold before you. Darwanism is such a diluted fragmented interpretation of evolution. Its laughable to witness a large population take on these things as truth. Its bled into our educational institutions because of the current focus derived from the powers that best agendas. We cannot bring up the soul and its purpose within us. In 1906 it was declared illegal, and inconclusive to entangle spiritual reality with scientific investigations. As a result of this we have failed to blend the spiritual realm with scientific endeavours, and as a result many will not adopt ultimate truth into their perceptual understanding. This carries on from generation to generation leaving many ignorant of these truths. We must restructure our systemic designs and bring them into alignment with spiritual principles if we are to ever align with harmonic coexistence.

To me it's quite simple. When we as a species stop playing our role by being kind, being loving, being selfless, and being understanding(spiritual principles) then it allows the primal animalistic vibrations(you can call it ego, or our shadow, our reflection, the primal) enter us and take hold turning us into truly animalistic beings in the sense of our thoughts processes and our perceptions of subjective reality. When we collectively act out in this way we self destruct, and these energies bleed into all institutional aspects of existence. Then as a result of fueling these lower vibrational perceptions we project our bullshit onto others ultimately. We fuel false egotistical driven illusions and entertain them until it becomes reality before our very eyes, and if left unattended it becomes hell to escape these lower vibrational thought patterns. We lose ourselves, and we fail our loved ones. It all goes back to universal morality.

For those who are new to this. Universal morality is a certain way of thinking, behaving, and acting. It is not subjective, it is universal in truth and essence. It cannot be analyzed, broken down by basic human logic. It must be respected and understood. We have within our structural DNA something I call an inner compass that is there to remind us and bring us back into alignment with universal laws & applications. This is why growing up you always hear about right & wrong, good or bad. This is because of the inner compass. It is the tool within us that if properly understood, acknowledged and listened to will align our perceptual existence with that of spiritual principles. Let's use one of my favorite philosophies to help further provoke this thought. The taoist understand this. They recognize universal design, but do not confine it into the parameters of human thesis & analysis. They leave it as it is, and do their part to bring themselves into alignment with these truths. Many ways to express these truths. So many philosophies that say the same thing but in a different manner relative to their location, and upbringing. "Same book different font" me and my loved one once called it. We all have our own ways of expressing and interpreting this. But one thing is certain, it is law. If humans do not individually and collectively abide by this law, then there are consequences. These consequences have entangled itself into all areas of modern human existence. It is not worth it, I promise you. The energy it takes to fuel the resistance of these truths is just too exhausting. It's way easier to just surrender your flawed human will & understanding in order to receive cosmic revelations and transform yourself using universal morality then it is to continue destructive perceptions that fuel the disconnect within ourselves. Trust me, I've resisted for a very, very long time. The energies, and revelations revealed and understood when abiding by universal morality are indescribable, completely & delicately yet intensely reshaping all fundamental existence within. You are plugged in so to speak, you are functioning and operating at what is required to be a spiritual being in a physical body. Why on earth would you knowingly seek a diluted earthly experience? You wouldn't....Once you all know you will all choose the path to righteousness.

I truly understand the skeptic within us all, I myself am one of those hard headed, over analyzing individuals who questioned absolutely everything simply because I acknowledge we are being manipulated as a result of individualism & we are fueling the process of spiritual evolution. This is why a spiritual skeptic is born. When the people telling you these so called truths hide a secret motive, or are insincere on an energy level we as humans tend to call bullshit, even if it's a subconscious thing. Look at modern day christianity, collectively it has been so infultrated by primal false energies that it no longer at its core is connected to anything heavenly or divine.

Like i said before all that is required to plug in and connect is to live in accordance to universal morality. Universal Morality is basically the Buddhist version of "The Eight Fold Path".

Universal Morality requires us to align ourselves with the right understanding(love, kindness, thoughtfulness, understanding, patience, forgiveness, wisdom, acceptance, encouragement, etc.) the right thoughts(entertaining loving & embracing thoughts & surrendering lower, primal thoughts that fuel the ego & separation within) the right actions(actions that are in alignment with these aspects) the right effort(what are your intentions, are they in alignment with these things? If not we must bring our intentions into a place of selflessness to an extent). All of these things in unison begin to rewire our state of being into a higher vibrational state of existence. One where we begin to be able to receive and interpret & practice cosmic revelations required to proceed with spiritual evolution. Just as all things must adapt, evolve & change so to must we as humans begin to understand & implement these things in our day to day lives. Yes at first when you begin the shedding & rewiring process of course it is hard & very difficult but thats with all things, my dear.

So you can see by the complexity of design that its important to make sure what you fill yourself with is not of the primal nature. Primal nature creates and fuels resistance towards universal morality. This is design. I see it, i feel it, i know it. So i am compelled to reveal it. This is the way. We are lost, we are broken, and we are tired. Enough is enough. One by one you will all see. Love is the only way. Love is the water to our bones, love is the sun to the flowers, love is the embrace of another, love is the very breath we breathe. All of those who oppose this have been infultrated by primal energies, and your stubborness and unwillingness causes so much destruction to us. Its okay, i am the same, we all are. None are pure in design, all fall short of the glory of our maker. We have been severed long ago, it is not our faults what we have been subjected to. However it is our faults if how we react to it causes harm to ourselves and others. Many do not care about these words. Many cannot pull themselves from the grasp of the primal long enough to resinate with the sources energy. They are lost in the sauce so to speak in terms of spiritual evolution. All we can do is be an example the best way we can. Its okay if you fall short, its okay if you've put yourself in a horrible situation. It's okay if you continue the same patterns over and over again, it's hard. That's why there are spirits, and entities that are here to help. Many call them angels, or spirit guides but to me names mean nothing, labels truly are destructive and dilutes the essence they capture. Words themselves have power because energy is within them, but even words don't encapsulate the entirety of the energy they're describing. This is why the Gnostics rely only on the inner workings, and discard the rest entirely. But regardless life is hard, if you need help cry out. Use your spirit & it's electromagnetic frequency as the tool it is. We are antennas, and we can pull interdimensional frequencies to us, so to speak. Some are very good at this. The tools used by those in power for example, to keep the consumer circus going they've used interdimensional frequencies in conjunction with advanced technology along side ritualistic magick to help the decline of spiritual evolution. And we knowingly or unknowingly give them access to penetrate our electromagnetic field with their agendas. Even if its intentions are simply for profit, the reprecutions on a spiritual level are catastrophic. So give yourself a break if you fuck up, or you're doing shitty and you know you got more in you. Just be kind to yourself so you can be kind to others. We're all struggling and dealing with the reprecussions of our collective spiritual decline. This is the importance of not taking the session or life you have here this time around too serious. There will be many more of your essences, recycling, & coming back in a new form over and over again. This is design. This is an eternal song and dance. Rejoice at the present, that's why they call it a gift. Rejoice at the pain because without it you cannot treasure the joy. Rejoice to rejoice, and then rejoice some more. We are alive. We are breathing without even knowing how we're doing it. So many intricate processes occuring within our body without us forcing it to happen. This is truly miraculous. Isn't it sad that we fill our limited space within with primal energies and cannot connect with this? Most will have no fucking idea what i am talking about, most will not have the attention span to simply sit down and absorb any of this, so if you are the ones who understand & absorb this with a childlike innocence and joy, then thank you! You are on your way to being or already are a credible entity. I've spent most my life in immense pain and suffering, feeling drowned out from this responsibility i am no longer dumbing things down or concerning myself with the resistance of those who fight this process. It's apparent all of our understanding is lacking. That's just what it is. I understand all the complexities of life and all the different perspectives our subjective experience can place us because I have walked many paths, many versions of myself I have been and every single time it always comes back to this. We are all one consciousness, our essense and spiritual core is connected to the source of all of life. All knowing is within us. All we must do is enter. It has always been within us. The kingdom of heaven is here, we are in heaven. We have the everlasting life, which is our spirit. We are walking, and talking miracles. Out of all the vastness of space and time you are alive. Here and now. All that is holding us back is the primal animalistic energies we fuel as a result of being severed from universal morality. The only way the primal(or ego)exists within the universe is through us. It is merely theoretical if we all reconnect with universal morality. But as we stand now, it is real as can be, because we allow it to be that way. This is the dualistic version of consciousness. It goes through shifts and cycles. We are at the cusp now at returning to unity and the way i like things to be.

The thing that will swing the tides back that way is, you guessed it. The dirty hippies got it right, love. Love is a pivotal force. It is priceless, and can light even the darkest of places. Love is what will help us understand universal morality as it truly is. Even where i stand now i still dont fully implement Universal Morality in my life in all aspects. I've spent most my life running from the responsibility of being what i am, I have been spoken to by universal forces trying to use me(use us all) to help ensure we succeed at the transition from the old into the new. What i do know is that if a person like me can find light and love in total darkness and connect to the source, that means all of you can. No excuses. We are in this together, and the way we have been collectively handling things is unacceptable. It's sad to say but now we must individually connect manually, and once it gets to a certain capacity we as a species will evolve, and no longer be stuck to the primal or near it enough for it to ever be anything more than theoretics. One day at a time. The complex patterns that need unravelled and replaced have taken time to become what they are today, it takes time to work our way back to the ability to tap into the source material. The source material being our natural design. The image of god so to speak. We are complex interdimensional beings who operate at a multidemensional level, and because of the complexity of this it is vital and important to understand we must act, think, and behave in a certain way to align our electromagnetic frequency with that of the source material. Once again the first step to this is to invite love into our field, and by that i mean we must keep love within us. Which is a continual effort, because its way easier to be angry, or hateful, or sad, or depressed then it is to resinate organically with love.

This is once again because of the primal energies within us. So you see its a messy process to align ourselves back to the source material. Which is truly sad that it's this damn hard to just be what we were naturally designed to be. Just more proof of how real this is, and also the immense, vital importance of being a credible entity, especially in todays times.

Because all life tells us now is to be selfish, focus on yourself and just survive, focusing on material gains in some weird illusion that it will somehow bring us inner peace or success. When in all reality success is a state of being not a tangible thing to possess. Basically modern day advanced cavemen is what we have been reduced to & it's a domino effect & to break this effect we must use love to connect us with universal morality and then by abiding by universal morality we connect with the source material, and a being who connects with the source then transfers that onto others just simply by being around them. If those around are open to love they themselves can then resinate with universal morality abide by it and connect with the source. So on and so forth, turning that domino effect of materialism into the pivotal transition required to achieve collective consciousness. This is universal design, it doesnt care if we understand it or not. Its just simply a design in which is constructed or woven to harmonize cosmic energies and bring them all collectively into the realm of the source material. This is what god is. We are it, and it is us. All of it. Anything that is energy all is constructed and processed through, or has some connection to some capacity to the source material. This much i have been shown. Past that its not necessary for us to analyze. Back to what I was saying about the Taoists. It's pointless from my perspective and what is needed to share the truth with the world. The rest of this information, or book or however your reading or hearing this will be me breaking down key things ivye spoken about & have unravelled throughout my life because i know for most what i say in general is hard to grasp. So i will make sure i go in full detail caring and thoughtfully about things like universal design, spiritual evolution, universal morality, and anything else that can further help anyone who needs more information to get on board with all this. It's ts time we as humans dust ourselves off, live in light and love & just enjoy and praise existence until we're no longer breathing. We all deserve to feel the sources peace and calm. This is what philosophies call the grace of god. We all deserve and crave light and love, even if we've warped our minds so much we can't see it or connect with it. People are suffering mentally and physically because of our disconnect. We fall for so many illusions by those who control us, and from our own day to day thought processes. We're basically being spiritual bombarded from every angle. This is why we need spiritual armor to shield us from the primal energies from tempting us or pestering us once we make the shift towards universal morality. The further you go down this path, the strongest the resistance within will try to pull you back into the depths of lower vibrational reality. 40 days & 40 nights. The armor is a side effect of holding love and light within you. It resinates at the highest dimension therefore it keeps us above the primal and its persuasion and influence, hence why its coined spiritual armor. Once we put on our nice and comfy armor, we can enter the battlefield swingin'.

I sincerely fucking love you. I promise you, we got this!

Credible Entities.

Credible Entities are individuals mainly in alignment with their emotions and rational capabilities.

The information and vibrations understood by these individuals is in alignment with objective reality & universal truth & the foundation of universal laws.

These are individuals who do not speak from a place of emotions, instead are individuals who understand the power and magic behind intentions, words, and actions. They move mainly with purpose and mindfulness. Mindfulness around the fact that we are all simultaneously experiencing objective reality together. A reality shaped by universal laws and doctrines. These individuals understand we must sacrifice to an extent the limited human perception that has become the norm in collective societies. These individuals tend to be forces of disruption towards the false foundations of fragmented perceptions and analysis. They also tend to have optimism even in dark, trialing situations and not as a means to escape negative emotions and reality but because they are rooted in universal truth. They know this is all temporary and we ultimately manifest our own subjective reality. These are usually beings who have met and danced with lady temptress & stood at the gates of oblivion and rather than it warping and diluting the essence of our spiritual nature. It fundamentally revolutionized it instead. These are the individuals that will make up the new world to come once we illuminate and expose the false world being painted over the natural order of things. These individuals ultimately chose this path by how they responded to each individual lesson, and chapter they've experienced. These beings fluctuate within the natural premises of our instinctual spiritual vibrations as a result of them filtering and processing the external stimuli they receive as a result of the human experience. These are the radical minds that are in the process of reshaping reality around us as is intended by design. We were never meant to embrace individualism yet we have created a world based soul on these aspects and characteristics. A response of these things is a schism within forming our understanding of what we categorize as dualistic. These individuals resignate from a unified state of consciousness and as a result they are connecting with higher vibrations than physicality itself. They take on knowingly or unknowingly the responsibility of illuminating unified consciousness to those bound by dualistic perceptions and analysis. This creates much resistance around them because the energy of the dualistic, individualism based reality is in essence the polarized opposite of collective consciousness. As we stand now these individuals are going against the current state of our collective existence since we have de-evolved into what we call modernization. Me efforts are as follows create terminology and the categorization of higher vibrational phenomenon and higher vibrational characteristics to better illuminate the forces within us all that are desperately trying to resurface. I hope that these descriptions bring about clarity to al in this battle to preserve mankind.

Dualistic Reality.

Dualistic Reality is the collective shared experience as a result of modernization and individualism where we have fallen for the illusory experience we call individuality. This is a fragmented perception separate from collective ultimate reality. Dualistic Reality becomes collectively experienced when we separate from our higher vibrational instinctual spiritual essence, and embrace the lower vibrational ego based reality that is separate from "we" and "us" and is intertwined with "I" and "me". As a result of this we form constructs such as a good and evil. Light and darkness. Wrong and right. When we do this we forget that there is no good or bad there just simply is. In the natural world these constructs do not exist. They only exist within us. When we are unified under shared beliefs that bring us in alignment with collective consciousness these such constructs do not exist. They become dissolved entirely. We are neither good nor bad. Right not wrong. Light not dark. We simply are. Ultimately Dualistic Reality to an extent is apart of the human journey through spiritual evolution. Once we enter into this domain of existence we are faced with a dilemma, reconnecting with our true spiritual nature in alignment with universal laws & doctrines or become consumed with a fragmented limited perceptual experience of ultimate reality. The side effect of the latter is catastrophic to our environment and to our shared experience. It's no surprise after receiving this information we begin to unravel the understanding that we are currently in the side effects of collectively sharing a Dualistic Reality. We all must begin to bring our individual selves into alignment with collective truth & universal laws in order to begin to embody a collective force strong enough to reshape fundamental reality around us. But in order to bring forth the magnitude of energy needed to bring about this shift we must first become credible entities that embody these energies with vigilance, consistency, and persistence. There are so many of us struggling to understand these things, and are controlled by fear or ignorance. It is very important when discussing these things we keep love in our hearts and refrain from judgment. Many of those seeking these truths have been lied to and manipulated by primal forces for generations and generations. They are programmed to dismiss anything placed before them as a result of countless bombardments of false truths in succession to one another. We cannot blame the flock for this. We as Shepard's must understand where we are collectively if we are to counterattack the primal forces of resistance towards spiritual evolution. Dualistic Reality is the battleground where seeds of unification take hold within credible entities that can plant these seeds into the hearts & minds of the unaware and unconscious. We must believe and have faith that all goes according to plan, that these seeds grow within the hearts and souls of those who seek these truths.

Transcendental Ideology.

What is enlightenment, or for one to be "awakened" or "enlightened". What is transcendental ideology, and how does this tie into this volumes overall theme. Let's first speak on enlightenment itself by definition and further exploration of its origin. The word "enlightenment" comes from the Latin prefix en- meaning "into" and the Old English word light meaning "to brighten" or "clarify". The word implies bringing clarity to knowledge. It can also referred to as a sudden realization or to be "awakened" or to have became "aware" of life's multitude of truths. Truths that reshape our minds, and alters our perceptions.

It can also refer to historical periods in time within a nation, society, or culture. When we look back and see an area in time with rapid progression this is usually associated with a form of collective "enlightenment" to some standard, or degree. One example of a historical time frame, The "Enlightenment" was an 18th century European period when thinkers began to emphasize science and reason over religion and tradition. This period was marked by scientific and mathematical discoveries, as well as religious and anti-religious innovation. These are the results of a society, or a collective tribe obtaining enlightenment. It is the essential process of revolutionary thinking, and following the spoils of an "enlightenment" period, you will see many advancements come to life.

Ultimately enlightenment is a state of awareness that goes hand in hand with a spiritual awakening within the individual, or collective tribe.

A lot of eastern philosophies and religions use enlightenment such as in Hinduism and Buddhism, enlightenment is sometimes called "awakening". For example, the name "Buddha" means "the awakened one". Mankind for centuries has deviced ideologies and practices to help ensure our overall spiritual development. The state of being as a result of these teachings and realizations is what I'm calling "enlightenment". Going back to the subject of esoteric and it's relation with us, to be enlightened is an inner process that is a result of certain realizations, usually brought about by implementing in our daily lives a certain thought process and belief system. From my years of study and understanding of philosophies and psychology, to reach enlightenment is a natural process for a human being to experience. We are born into a physical world, within us lies spiritual energies that tie us into collective reality. As a result of this we experience a stage in life where we learn the basics of life(exoteric understanding) and we reach a certain point where things can no longer be explained or revealed this way. We then turn within ourselves to find the answers, this is an esoteric practice of learning. Meaning we naturally progress from a base form, into a higher form of understanding.

One of my favorite esoteric teachings is spiritual alchemy, and it speaks on this process entirely. Turning our base primal self, into our higher form of self. This is similar to Buddha and the "awakened one". In Buddhism one must remove themselves from any earthly or material attachment, primarily human desires, instant gratification, and ultimately pettiness, unforgiveness, spite, and another other more primal based emotions, and as a result from this one experiences a transcendental shift in consciousness. This state of being comes about from enlightenment, and to be an enlightened or awakened one is to be a Buddha. Another example is how in Mystic Christianity one must "sacrifice" their pride, and egos, and illusory self in order to be born again. Once again we see a common theme of shifting consciousness from material to spiritual and as a result of this one is born again. To crucify oneself the end result is to be Christ like. It doesn't stop here. Almost all esoteric religions, cultures and practices involve shifting from the primal form into a higher form. All of which are brought about by one being enlightened. All at their core are ultimately representing transcendental ideology. Another term is polarization, and transmuting. The foundation of transforming from the base, primal, surface-level self, into a new higher, wiser, and spiritual self. Most religions and philosophy at their core contain transcendental ideology which leads one to transcendence. A basic interpretation is that their is a spiritual or nonphysical realm, and human beings can tap into this realm. But a certain set of requirements are needed in order to enter into the vibration or "state of mind" needed to connect to this spirit realm. Many mystics throughout time have created guidelines, teachings, and practices that are needed to bring ones self into realms beyond physicality, giving birth to transcendental ideology.

Transcendence is a state of being that has overcome the limitations of physical existence in terms of conceptualization and perceptual understanding, and by some definitions, has also become independent of it. This is where esoteric ties in. One can enter into a transcendental mind set through rigorous and virtuous prayer, rituals, meditation, psychedelics and paranormal visions brought about by clairvoyance and other electromagnetic sensitivities. By transcending our way of thinking into that which is associated with the spiritual realm we get a blast of clarity when looking down so to speak into the physical realm and can apply this new understanding into our day to day lives. This creates a radical change within ourselves and the entities around us. We begin to see the power of our thoughts, actions, intentions, and the infinite possibilities we possess as humans here on earth through the ability to bring ideas from vastly different realms of thought into the material realm. This type of power entangled with humility is what I believe we are here for on earth. To create, cherish, thrive, and unite with our fellow brethren under the stars and sky, all interconnected, intricately woven together into all things. This type of realization foundationally restructures your entire human experience. The beauty that comes from these realizations is enough to drop you to your knees, and cry deeply out of sharing such a deep connection to all things, and all existence. I have felt that feeling multiple times in my life, and because of it even on my darkest days I have love, faith, & hope within me. To realize we are apart of all this.....it's truly transformative. It shows us that we are so much more than our looks, our paycheck, our possessions, our mistakes, our successes. We are everything simultaneously experiences itself through each individual with their own fragmented viewpoint, and perspective that makes them unique, and irreplaceable.

From my heart to yours.

Collective Consciousness.

Collective Consciousness or Collective Reality is the shared existence that is bound by shared beliefs, actions, and ideology associated with spiritual principles and ultimate reality. It has also been referred to as "hive" mind or collective "mind" & is ultimately a higher vibrational state of being where we dissolve the fragmented perceptions and analysis associated with "I", "Myself", "Me" and the entire thought process brought about by individualism. It is my belief is that the true human experience is only experienced from a collective consciousness state, and that anything else is a diluted, fragmented experience associated with lower vibrational existence which brings forth human experiences such as greed, possession, envy, jealousy, prejudice & any other lower, primal form of thought realms. With collective consciousness we have evolved beyond separation of self & are hardwired into a harmonious rhythm of cosmic revelation manifested within us all. It is my belief that we naturally are engineered to fluctuate at this capacity and this capacity alone, and anything separate from this brings about the conceptualization of human suffering as we know it today. Collective consciousness brings about its own set of characteristics that manifest within us. These characteristics are of a higher vibrational expression in terms of human experience. There is no room, or even a need to focus on "I". We have evolved beyond such constructs. When we look at parables such as Lucifer falling from "heaven" and bringing enlightenment to other angels to also split from heaven what we are describing is the transition from collective consciousness into individualism as we know it today. This also reveals to us a cosmic cycle of mass proportions and gives us a glimpse into universal rhythm and progression, alongside destruction and decompression. We are currently in the state of shedding the illusion of self individually, which if done properly will eventually domino into a massive shift transitioning us into collective consciousness which I describe as the process of spiritual evolution. We must begin to understand concepts such as these if we are to ever begin the journey within to transition from the old into the new. This way of life has been far outdated. Individualism has proven to us that division is the only answer and solution for itself. But with collective consciousness we must integrate into what is most beneficial for us all. There is no room for division, it simply does not exist within the confines of collective reality. With collective consciousness your not choosing love over hate. Your not choosing right over wrong. Your choosing what is statistically the most efficient way to exist in harmony with ourselves, others, and the natural world we live in. Everything else is non-existent. We must learn that it isn't about morality or doing what's right overall. That is a bi-product of duality. The more we think within those realms the more we fuel the resistance of collective truth. This is where the dissolving of illusions comes into place. The illusion being dualistic Reality, and how do we condense that truth into actuality in terms of intentions, actions, and desire? We must surrender, or sacrifice so to speak the limited perceptions of ourselves and our own human will. Only then can we begin to truly be capable of handling such cosmic revelations within ourselves.
